YOUNG HEARTS CLUB ENJOYS BUS TOUR

On last Wednesday morning, May 19, forty-seven members and guests of the Young Hearts Club left at 7:30 by chartered bus to visit Chinqua-Penn Plantation near Reidsville, N.C.

The first stop was at Eden where the group visited Fieldcrest and made purchases. After having lunch in Eden, they arrived at the plantation around 1 o'clock. There a guided tour of the house and unguided walks through the gardens and grounds were enjoyed by everyone for several hours.

Chinqua-Penn was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Penn from 1923 to 1965. In the words of Mrs. Penn, "We named the place Chinqua-Penn. The chinquapin bush grew on this hill. We thought it appropriate to spell the name Chinqua-Penn." On May 21, 1965 the house and gardens were inherited by the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. The 27 room house of stone and logs built by the Penns represents no specific architectural style, but the real magnificance is seen in its interior furnishings, gathered throughout the world during their travels, and in its setting. Moving from room to room is like traveling to a different country everytime a door is opened. The furnishings in the house reflect the periods and cultures that fascinated the Penns.

After a stopover in Danville for the evening meal the group arrived home about 8:30. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the day and expressed gratitude to Mrs. Helen Gunter, president of the club, for arranging the trip.

Don't Flunk Lunch

Can a student fail lunch? Yes, or rather the lunch can fail the student if the mid-day meal does not provide an adequate level of energy and nutrition to carry the youngster through the afternoon classes and after-school projects or play. A sound, nutritional lunch should provide at least ⅓ of the Recommended Dietary Allowances for children. Including a serving of a pork product in the lunch will fulfill many of the needs for high quality protein, B vitamins and other important nutrients. Completing the lunch with servings of fruits and vegetables, grains and dairy products will insure that lunch receives a "passing grade" and won't fail the student.

American Legion Presents Flag

On Friday morning of last week, Ronald Spiggle, Commander of American Legion Post 104, presented a Virginia State flag to Jay Eubank, Wagon Master, who is making a trip from Bryan, Texas to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania in a covered wagon to commemorate the Bicentennial. He plans to stop overnight at the White House in Washington, D.C. and to be in Valley Forge, PA by July 3, 1976. He was in Appomattox Thursday and Frida - morning of last week.
